HOW TO HELP THE SMALL FARMERS.

Editor Advertiser;-I would like to ernor and show him where he might find a great number of "keen, inteligent, scientific and able" farmers right at home, by the exercise of a little home mission work, that would cost his government nothing but would slightly increase its revenue, and would do far more to assist the small farmers and increase the products of the coun-

Let me first say that there is scarcely one small farmer on Oahu who is it a position to handle his farm as his own or as he would choose to do, for various reasons, some of which are a follows:

He may be working for a salary and MADEIRA embroidery; ladies' and expending what he can each month for labor on his farm; this labor he can not watch and oversee as it should be, hence although his researches and scientific experiments on a small scale have proven much to him, his efforts with the small farm are not only retarded but almost a failure.

Another man understands something of his farming venture, but has no money and is backed up by another man whose only idea is to keep the man on the place until he has received a government title, then use the land thus obtained for corporation purposes. The man thus backed up is not allowed sufficient means to carry out his own views and his scientific and economic plans are for naught. Another still, has the right idea, but must keep at other employment and even with that can hardly care for himself and family, hence must make practically a partnership contract with the man he employs as a laborer; the man who has taken the land, although with bona fide intentions, must give the laborer his way in many things, or lose the little development on his place: hence his efforts are of little avail-

All the small farmers have one thing and another in these and various ways to contend with, and although they eex and his practical test, and read
